TO BECOME ONE PROHIBITION DISTRICT

OHIO AND WEST VIRGINIA LINKED TOGETHER AS A UNIT

Headquarters For the Two States Will Be Established At Columbus Which Will Become the Center of Enforcement Work—Thomas Stone Is Touted As the New Director.

That Thomas E. Stone, regional prohibition director at Cleveland will become the federal prohibition administrator for the new district composed of Ohio and West Virginia with headquarters at Columbus is persistently reported.

The new scheme abolishes the office of state director now held by L. I. Porterfield, but gossip here is that Porterfield will continue in the prohibition enforcement in some capacity.

The new program under which Assistant Secretary Andrews will seek to make the country dry was announced Tuesday, and the way was paved for radical changes in the personnel now engaged in the work.

State lines will be abolished, federal directors for each state will be eliminated, new districts founded wholly on lines bounding federal judicial districts will be created and a general decentralization of authority will take place in the reorganization. The weeding out of undesirable will be accomplished without haste, since Andrews has no intention of filling the entire list of places immediately and later finding he has appointees with whom he is not satisfied.

The Washington headquarters, where authority has centered since the Volstead act was passed will be conducted under the same officers as at present but their duties will be more of a supervisory and less of an administrative character.

Each of the district officials will have two assistants, one of whom will have charge of permissive work, or the control of permits, and distribution while the other will devote his efforts to enforcement.

Andrews is convinced that a substantial saving in expenditures will be effected under the new scheme. He said he had not been able to calculate the total cost of carrying on the work under the new system but believed a considerable reduction in personnel would result.

He already has begun consideration of the question of better pay for the administrators and their two assistants. His thought is to make the job attractive, financially, to valuable men and he has asked Comptroller General McCarl for a ruling on the salary question. It was reported that he intended to establish salaries as high as $10,000 a year for the administrators.

Columbus will be known as administrative headquarters for district 11, which will include Ohio and West Virginia.

The new program has the approval of the president and in making it public Secretary Mellon expressed also his own whole-hearted support.

EASTERN STAR INSPECTION BIG SUCCESS

One of the best meetings in the history of Circleville chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, was that of Tuesday evening, the occasion being the annual inspection of the work, books and property of the chapter.

H., made her report of the inspection and it she gave high praise to Worthy Matron Irma Stevenson and all her subordinate officers.

The chapter was honored by a visit from Grand Worthy Matron Hazel Beach, of London, who in a most happy speech expressed her great pleasure on being present and complimented the officers of Circleville chapter on the quality of the work.

Other grand officers at the meeting were Grand Electa Rena Johnson of Highland, Ohio; Grand Martha Amy Cromley Nickerson, of this city and Mrs. Emily Grob, of Columbus, grand representative from Arkansas.

OVERTIME PERIOD

Required By Washington To Defeat Circleville Eagles Sunday Afternoon.

Sunday's Results

Washington 4; Circleville 3, (13 innings).
Wilmington 10; London 5.

With the chance of going into a tie for first place in the South Central Ohio League, Circleville went to Washington Sunday, and put up a fine article of ball, but after thirteen hectic innings they tasted defeat by a score of 4 to 3 and dropped to third position while the Washington team secured a commanding hold on the top rung of the ladder.

In the meantime Wilmington invaded London and got away with a 10 to 5 victory which gave them second place. On next Sunday Wilmington will meet the Eagles here and the Birds are determined to change berths with them in this game.

The game at Washington Sunday was a nice article of ball and many old time fans stated it was the best game they had ever seen in that town.

There was enough hitting to keep up the interest, for the spectators, but both pitchers, McGrainer and Burst, were very stingy when hits meant runs, and both kept the safe blows well distributed. Burst established a nice record in the fore part of the game when Circleville could not reach first base in the second, third, fourth and fifth innings, and McGrainer showed a wonderful brand of pitching when he shut the home team out from the fourth to the thirteenth.

Both teams put up a snappy game afield, but one error being made in the entire game.

Circleville's three runs came in the first, sixth and eighth innings, Rife making the first two, scoring on Targee's hit in the first and McGrainer's safety in the sixth. The tying run in the eighth was one of those spectacular affairs. With two men down Allen hit safely and was followed by McGrainer, who hit one that dropped in the farthest point inside the field, in the center field corner. Jones' good whip held Mac at third and he was left when Targee was thrown out at first for the final out. Mac's hit was a terrific blow and would have cleared the fences if it had been a few feet to either side.

Washington tied the score in the second on hits by Orahoad and Sollars and an infield out, and took the lead in the fourth when Doyle hit safely and Haley tripled and scored while Sollars was being thrown out at first.

Washington broke up the game in the last of the thirteenth and Sammy Burst won his own game by leading off with a safe hit. He reached third while Jones and Moon were being retired and scored on Tommy Doyle's safe hit. Doyle's rap was a hard drive to the left of second base and Charley Rife made a beautiful attempt to reach the ball, but just touched it with the tip of his glove.

The kind of ball that is being played in this league is equal to that seen anywhere and a big crowd should be present next Sunday and root the Birds into second place.

FINAL ARRANGEMENTS

Completed For 500 Boys Who Will Go To Camp Roosevelt On June 29th.

Final arrangements have been completed for the 500 boys who are going to Camp Roosevelt at Fort Sheridan, Illinois, on the afternoon of June 29, to attend the first period of the summer's encampment. Streets of large army pyramidal tents, rows on rows of coats piled high with blankets, and a well stocked mess hall with doors wide open stand ready to greet the rookies when they alight from the special train which will leave the Congress street stub of the Northwestern Elevated railroad in Chicago at 1:30 p. m. daylight saving time. Boys coming from other cities will meet this train.

The unusually keen interest in this summer's encampment is attributed by Major F. L. Beals, in command, to the new location at Fort Sheridan, and the romance and glamor attendant upon living in the same manner as Uncle Sam's vast army of soldiers.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milk cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides. Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

In the year 1923 the people of the United States spent nearly $390,000,000 for candy, an average of more than $1,000,000 a day. UNCLE SAM'S FINANCES

Washington, June 23.—(UP.)—As his last important official act before leaving the capital for the summer, President Coolidge has announced the existence of a treasury surplus this year of $200,000,000 which will enable him to recommend a general tax reduction program to the next congress. The president and Mrs. Coolidge leave Washington by special train early this afternoon to spend a two months' vacation at Swampscott, Mass., where a "summer white house" will be set up.

Waistline, Longer Skirts Presented

Prominent Paris Designer
Offers Some Interesting Models.

When a dress authority announces a radical innovation, the always fascinating and usually perplexing subject of fashions becomes a matter of the moment. Long after a standard is accepted its vogue continues. Once it becomes the mode, women of fashion keep to it tenaciously. Anything revolutionary in dress is slow in coming, and ordinarily passes quite as slowly.

Among the smartly dressed women of today no one seems to recall just when the waistline widened from a small steel-bound circle to a wider one of ease, or when the belt dropped from its normal point to one almost out of sight, says a fashion writer in the New York Times. But these two things changed the entire style of costumes a few seasons ago and wiped out centuries of prejudice and convention. It required something of the crusader's spirit to abolish the rigid lines and formality that stays, bands and crinolines gave to the fashionable figure. But somehow, in the sweep toward more wholesome ways, this came about. The easy bodice that shows no curve between neck and hipline, the collar that leaves breathing room and the skirt that clears the ground expressed style in terms of comfort. They appeared to have come to stay. But that is not the way of fashion, and modern dress lacks the conservatism of highland kilts.

We have always the thrill of expectancy and the consciously smart is the one who is first to swing the trend in an opposite direction.

To Restore Waistline.

Jean Patou, who has succeeded in establishing a sympathetic sense of American taste in dress, has decided to restore the waistline. Just what part he took in its obliteration, a while ago, no one seems to recall. But lately he has presented some interesting examples in which a woman's waist is charmingly and becomingly indicated just where it belongs. Now this is to be accomplished without bringing back the trappings that form artificial curves is not clear, but that is one of the privileged secrets of a designer's art. There are historic precedents for his guidance.

In several models of one sort and another, usually evening dress, or the positive opposite, such as tailored costumes, there have been shown the possibilities of a normal belt line, and since Patou has declared for it, his master hand may safely be trusted. To this creator is also credited a lengthening of the skirt.

Such revulsion of sentiment followed the introduction of the knee-length skirt a few seasons ago that little by little hems were dropped, and some of the leading couturiers made their smartest models with skirts that touched the floor. Quite unaccountably the advance styles from most of the representative houses this spring returned to the extremely short skirt, so short, in fact, that the more exclusive clientele rebelled. So Patou's endorsement comes at the psychological moment. The response to this suggestion is already evident in all types of dress but sports clothes, and even here, although having a shorter skirt than the more formal gowns, are still only short enough for freedom of action—several inches below the knee. On one innovation designers and their audience are agreed—the ensemble. It is not easy to discover the reason of the style that immediately becomes the rage. It is possible that the extreme, sometimes discordant motifs, introduced one after another through past seasons, with violent colors that threatened to blunt the color sense, brought a demand for uniformity and symmetry. In the separate garments, skirts and blouses, rocks and wraps, ingenuity was exhausted and senses were wearied to satiety with the sensational. It was something suggesting consistency as evolved. Thus the madly popular ensemble came into being.

Popularity of Ensemble.
Ensemble has for many years signified harmony in design, color and taste in the entire costume of a woman. This season the word is a kind of slogan presenting the popular version of an old idea—the three-piece gown. That was a sort of glorified tailored suit in which broadcloth or some other heavy suiting was combined with finer materials, a rather weighty composition. It did not "go" for just that reason. With the introduction of lightweight, soft materials in a season that is madly, intensely, almost wholly silk, the ensemble has become a compelling idea.

The year's first ensemble was built of a frock in some soft fabric—silk, crepe, voile, chiffon—with a wrap lined with the dress material. The result was practical and unusually charming. It gave one a complete costume, and the coat or cape was a comfortable accessory. The idea has been developed in countless ways and in as many materials as the season offers.

Women and their dressmakers have gone ensemble mad, and everything possible in the changing phases of styles has been translated into an ensemble. There is the ensemble for the street, for afternoon and for daytime dress for every occasion. These run the gamut of new ideas in materials and novelty of composition.

The most usual ensemble of service value is accomplished with a printed crepe for the frock, a three-quarter or seven-eighth length coat of plain goods lined with the figured crepe to match the dress. With the great variety of new patterns brought out by leading manufacturers the possible variants in this type of outfit are almost without limit. The coat is nearly always made of satin, of silk poplin or of the wide-wale bengaline. Many uncommon and delightful color combinations are shown.

This is a year of soft fabrics, which have so completely captivated the fashionable world that heavier materials are eclipsed, and nothing is too sheer or fragile to build an ensemble.

In a unique model from a prominent French house the usual order is reversed, and a coat of flat crepe, of which the frock is made, is lined with kasha, for warmth. In another engaging model, the crepe de chine wrap matching the dress is lined with velvet. The quintessence of grace and elegance is expressed in an afternoon ensemble of an indestructible voile, the predominating novelty of the season. This voile in a floral pattern of several beautiful colors on a black ground is made after a softly draped, rather simple mode.

New Materials Introduced.

Again Worth scores in some ensembles of distinction in which he introduces delicate fabrics combined with heavier silks, and sometimes with two materials of the same weight, one figured, the other plain. Drecoll, too, has done some beautiful ensembles for the early season, and some afternoon costumes of this type have come from the ateliers of Molyneux and Goupy. The idea has taken so well this side of the water that every modiste and dressmaker is doing ensembles of any and every sort of goods.

The number of new materials introduced in the ensembles is particularly interesting, for they illustrate also the latest fancies in color. Silk alpaca is much liked and is shown in lovely shades of beige, gray and in several greens. This material in emerald green is made into a simple straight-line frock with a coat of the same shade lined with lighter green crepe de chine. Chanel, who creates this smart, refreshing ensemble for afternoon, has done some strikingly original things in combining plain materials of pleasantly harmonizing colors.

Some of the best Paris designers are using much lace, all of the novelty all-overs in beige and ecru, and a great deal of chintilly, combining it with the crepes and voiles for afternoon ensembles suitable for warmer months. An indestructible voile in rose beige with softly tinted floral design is made into a charming afternoon gown after a rather "dresy" model, and with this is a long, straight, loose coat of beige lace, lined with the voile, with subtle artistic effect.

CLOTHING CLUB OF DEERCREEK MET JUNE 18

Once again the Clothing club of Deercreek township met to hold their regular meeting June 18, at the school house. The meeting was called to order by the president, Carolyn Bockard and opened by singing several selections of club songs. The secretary's report was then read.

The members answered roll call by giving the title and author of a good book they had read.

During the business period, the program for the next meeting was read. After the business period was over the meeting was turned over to the leader, Mrs. Wanda Wardell and members were assisted in making club aprons. At the dinner hour everyone enjoyed a box lunch in the school dining room. During the afternoon games were played which had been planned by the entertainment committee; Marvete Carter, Magdalene Wardell, Eleanor Slager and Elizabeth Warner.

The meeting was again turned over to our leader, Mrs. Wardell. Irene Baird gave a demonstration, "How to Draft a Kimono Dress Pattern." Patterns were then cut out by the members of the club.

The next meeting will be held Wednesday afternoon July 1, at the school building. All members are requested to be present, as plans will be made for the "County Club Tour" July 9.

WHAT DOES MODERN GIRL REALLY WANT?

Question One of Them
Finds Hard to Answer.

When you analyze the question of what modern girls really want, it is necessary to disabuse the mind of the delightfully vague, magazine-cover, tennis-playing, matinee-going creature as a true conception of the modern girl.

In a general way, the modern girl belongs to two recognized social classes—the middle classes—and how many subdivisions are here!—and the class which is generally known as the "upper."

In the middle class you will find that the vaguest and most doubtful feminine member of the family has been taught the art of shorthand and typewriting. In the firm conviction that sooner or later she will become an "invaluable asset to the firm" and find romance in the course of her work. What she wants is either to be taught to spell and write her own language, or to clear the course for the professional girl, "A Most Modern Girl" writes, in the Washington Post.

In the next social subsection there is the girl who works spasmodically—in every sense of the word—and whose family seems to spend its time imploring her to "give it up" and "stay at home and help mother." Whether she realizes it or not, the only possible solution of her problem is matrimony, with a strong accent on the last syllable in view of her general inability to cope with anything for long.

Then there is the real professional girl, by which is meant the girl who works because she must, and who works thoroughly because she enjoys it, and because she means to get there. What does she want? Certainly she smokes too much; she "gads about" too much; spends too much, flirts too much. But why not? Hers is the doubtful privilege of being an important man's right hand for years, and of receiving the "sack" when he dies. The humiliating classification of "surplus" is applied to those of her number who are not fortunate enough to find a man to marry them. . . . She does not know what she wants—so she eats, works and is merry.

Here's Another Idea of Ancestry of Man

Most men believe that mankind is descended from one "Adam" or a single pre-human stock. Dr. Francis Graham, writing in the Forum, as a result of his studies of a type of imbecility called Mongolism, concludes that mankind is of three-fold origin.

According to this scheme, three great branches once diverged from a common stem. From one branch sprang the oranges and Mongolian and Australo-Caucasian man. From another the gorillas and the negroes. From the third the chimpanzees, and probably the Mesopotamian races.

Now, although schemes of this sort have been bitterly attacked, they do at any rate "explain" not only the occurrence of the Mongol in our midst, but the characters and incidence of certain forms of imbecility other than that we call Mongolism. If this hypothesis becomes established we shall have to admit that the population of Europe is a blend, in different proportions, of the black, the white and the yellow, and we shall find no difficulty in understanding many facts in anatomy and in medicine that have hitherto baffled us.

AMUSEMENTS

"Wages of Virtue" Gloria Swanson latest Paramount production, directed by Allan Dwan who made both "Man-handled" and "Her Love Story" will be shown today at the Met theater. The story is an adaptation by Forrest Halsey of the popular novel of the same name by Percival Wren.

The picture is a pleasing love tale woven about a young girl, product of the slums, who becomes the toast of the French Foreign Legion. As Carmelita, Miss Swanson has a role ideally suited to her, a part that makes "Wages of Virtue" stand out as the greatest thing she has ever done in her lengthy career.

The story has interest, appeal, comedy and all the rest, and we sure miss our guess if it doesn't prove the finest entertainment you've witnessed in many months.

Ben Lyon, you remember him in First National's "Flaming Youth," "Painted People," etc., plays opposite the star, heading a real all-star cast. Norman Trevor, Ivan Linow, Joe Moore, Armand Cortez, Adrienne d'Ambricourt and Paul Panzer are a few of the prominent players in the other roles.

NOTICE

Apricots by the Yard.
There seems to be nothing in Damascus they cannot turn into a sweet of some kind. The sweetstuffs of Damascus are famous; they are really candied fruits. As the climate is hot, every form of plum, apricot, peach, melon, grape, greengage and nut grows. These are soaked in sugar preparations, and when served they are most luscious. Put in tins or bottles they last for years; but when freshly made they are perfectly delicious, especially the walnuts. For packing, round common wooden boxes are used, quaintly stenciled in Arabic design, and these boxes of dried fruit are sent all over the world, but of course nothing is ever so good when it has been packed as it is when it is freshly made.

PIG RAISING IS DISCUSSED BY AN EXPERT

Porkers Should be put on the Fall Market as Early as Possible.

Not only is it advisable to push pigs on pasture, but it is the one plan that has been found to be most profitable to the farmer.

Professor John M. Evvard, swine expert, gave this statement to his class in a lecture before the Radio Farm school of the Blue Valley Creamery institute. And Professor Evvard ought to know. For fifteen years now he has been in charge of the experimental work with live stock at Iowa State college. Furthermore he gave the data upon which he based his conclusions.

"Spring pigs may either take the short route to the pork barrel by hitting the market from September to early December, or they may take the long route marketward by getting there around Christmas time or as late as next fall," Professor Evvard said. "If pigs of this spring's farrow go to market in the fall of 1926, they will be practically a year and half old and classed as heavies. Inasmuch as heavies do not usually sell well as compared to light hogs in the fall of the year, there is not only a discount in price but in addition we have the excessive overhead costs as well as surplus charges. It would seem there fore that pigs should be pushed for all they are worth until on the way to market in the first to late months of fall.

"Skimping on pasture is a costly error, as we have found out in our experiments. Pigs on Alfalfa receiving a limited ration during the grazing season and which were full fed after the pasture season closed took 192 days to get to the 225 pound weight. Self fed pigs took 402 pounds of concentrate per hundred pounds of gain, 21 pounds of which was tankage, whereas the self fed ones took only 394 pounds. The self fed pigs, too, required only 13 pounds of tankage for the hundred pounds of gain. The difference in the selling price of a hundred pounds for November than for December was about two dollars per pig; so this has considerable money making significance. Too, since the self fed lot took less pasture, which is worth from $20 to $40 an acre for hay-making purposes, there was a gain there."

Farmers should aim to get their pigs to market in the early fall where ever possible, states Professor Evvard who says pigs pushed rapidly on the proper feed will get to the required selling weight of 200, 225 pounds in six to eight months and so bring the highest prices. This also makes it possible to clear the pastures and houses for the fall pigs which require space, time and attention at that season of the year.

Continent Believed to Lie Under Ocean

Does the Atlantic ocean roll over a lost continent? Le Plongeon, who deciphered the hieroglyphics among the ruins of Yucatan, in Central America, came upon inscriptions describing a catastrophe which submerged the old Atlantean continent, legends of which have survived in literature from the earliest times.

It may be that this catastrophe gave rise to the equally widespread belief in the flood which destroyed the early inhabitants of our planet. Certain it is that the American continent, although called the New world, is geologically the oldest land on the globe, and the monuments found in the jungles of Yucatan were ancient when the pyramids of Egypt were built.

The catastrophe is supposed to have taken place about 9000 B. C., and at that time there was a highly organized civilization in Yucatan, which would seem to be a remnant of the lost continent. It is not a very large country, yet, in spite of the great difficulties of exploration, the ruins of 172 cities have been discovered. Some of these are so extensive that they must have contained half a million inhabitants, and it is possible that the pyramids found in the jungle gave the pattern at a much later date to the pharaohs of Egypt.

CULTURED CLAIRE

By JANE GOODELL

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

CLAIRE was industriously trying to make the shabby living room look like the pictures in the latest furniture advertisement.

"The only thing this furniture is good for is the junk heap," she grumbled. "Why on earth won't dad let us fix things up a little? The trouble with him and all the rest of you is that you lack refinement," and she flashed a haughty look at Mag, who was watching her from the doorway.

"Oh, can the culture, Sis," Mag retorted. "Pop's all right and so are most of the rest of us. The trouble is, you're trying to be a high-brow. Why the decorations just because you're going to have a beau?" and she pointed to a vase holding two rather wilted carnations which Claire had brought home from the store.

But Claire was too busily engaged in placing some books' carelessly on the table to reply.

"Books surely do lend an air, Mag," she said. "Wish I'd had time to stop at the library to get a book by George Elliot. Oswald mentioned one last evening and I said I had read some of his books but had forgotten their names. These two books of poetry will make up for it, though. How does my hair look? These jade earrings are the very latest.

"Sara loaned them to me. You see, Oswald is real class. He has charge of the gents' furnishings and makes good money. Mother gave me her word that all the rest of the family would stay in the kitchen tonight. They would only queer me; you know that."

Being one of the family designated for the culinary department and the time near at hand for the arrival of Oswald, Mag took her sewing and joined the less refined members of her family. Claire heard them laugh uproariously on her arrival. She knew that they were having some fun at her expense. But that was her trial in being different from the rest. After locking the door against Bob's possible entrance to "queer" her, she settled herself on the old-fashioned sofa, the light rather low, with the poems and thoughts of Oswald.

Good-looking Oswald. No more clerking in stores, if he married her. Fine clothes. Thus the time slipped by.

Oswald, meantime, tapped on the door in a gentlemanly way, but the loud rendition of the "Deep Sea Blues" on a nearby neighbor's player piano entirely drowned out his tapping.

Claire had drawn the shades to the lowest possible point, so the impression made on the outsider was that the house was in darkness. Seeing a bright light in the rear of the house and hearing merry bursts of laughter from a partly open window, Oswald walked around and tapped just as gentlemanly on the rear door.

"Come in," called dad, rather expecting a friend for his evening game of checkers.

"May I introduce myself?" said the polite Oswald. "You surely look like a happy family. Being alone in the city I don't often run into anything like this."

"Have a chair and help settle some of our disputes," said the hospitable dad, offering him a cigar. "Bring more coffee and doughnuts, mother."

Oswald seemed quite at ease. "That looks like a work of art, Miss Margaret," he said. "May I ask just what—?"

"It's a new paisley blouse," responded Mag with a display of white teeth and pretty dimples. "We have to hand it to old King Tut for these swanky oriental affairs. He sure made us all get busy and follow his styles. But, say, dad, show Mr. Oswald that book I brought from the library. You see, dad's quite up on archeology himself, and it was of Egypt we were talking when you came in. I asked the librarian for a book on oriental collections. Incidentally I copied this blouse from a picture of Pharaoh's wife. Dad thinks—"

But what dad thought was not what Oswald thought and the argument was hot.

Mother brought a fresh supply of doughnuts and coffee and time slipped by.

A noise as if a high-heeled shoe were thrown viciously on the floor roused them a little from their conversation. Another followed at a short interval and there was a pause in the talk.

"It's Claire getting ready for bed. That's the way she acts when she's peeved at something," said Bob, his enunciation being as distinct as was possible without doing an injustice to a large red apple, the third he had devoured that evening.

"Why, can it be bedtime?" Looking at his watch, Oswald verified his own question. "But Miss Claire," he gasped. "I came to call on Miss Claire. Perhaps, though, she forgot and went out for the evening. I'm afraid I've intruded on you folks too long. But I've surely enjoyed the evening. Learned a lot, too, Mr. Dennis.

"And, Mag—Miss Margaret, how about looking over those Egyptian specimens at the museum on Saturday? And, by the way, if the little paisley blouse is finished, wear it. We may go somewhere for dinner."

Must Wait

A certain furniture shop was famous for its antiques. A stranger entered one morning and was met by a small boy, who told him the proprietor was not in.

"Perhaps you can tell me what I want to know," he said to the boy. "I called two weeks ago regarding half a dozen genuine old Empire chairs. You had only two of them in at the time, but were expecting the other four at any moment. Have they arrived?"

"No, sir," replied the boy. "They haven't finished making 'em yet."—Minneapolis Tribune.

Egg Transportation Not Profitable to Railroads

New York consumes 1,800,000,000 eggs a year and then a few dozen more. The job of getting them from the farmyard to the counter of the corner store is beset with difficult problems. The breakfast table depends on the carrier as well as on the hen, says the Times of that city.

Time was, and not very long ago, when the railroads lost money on every case of eggs they handled. Even now eggs are classed by the railroads as traffic without profit. Sometimes the breakage is due to the character of the egg. Many of them have shells naturally too weak to stand a long journey; the hens have been improperly fed. Fertile eggs, too, are likely to go to pieces on the trip. The United States Department of Agriculture estimates an annual loss from fertile eggs in this country amounting to $15,000,000. Again, some eggs are too long for standard fillers and suffer "end crush" as a result.

Washington Boy Is Pig Contest Winner

His Litter Produced 3,055 Pounds of Pork.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A farm boy of Spokane county, Wash., belonging to a junior agricultural extension club, was a ton-litter contest winner of 1924, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture. He not only produced 3,055 pounds of pork from one litter of pigs in six months, but kept a careful record of how he did it, including the kind and amount of feeds used and all expense involved. His records show that his pigs made an average daily gain of 1.4 pounds each each from date of birth until sold. This gain cost a little less than 8 1-3 cents per pound, not including alfalfa pasture to which the pigs always had free access. The boy sold his prize winners to a packing house for $11.10 per 100 pounds, receiving 25 cents per 100 pounds because of the excellent finish of his hogs.

This young stockman, Fred Gray, began in the swine business about two years ago by joining a pig club which the junior agricultural extension agent of the county organized, buying a pig as other pig club members do, to feed and manage in demonstrating the economic value of the best methods in swine husbandry. His purchase was a Duroc sow of excellent type. He built a warm, movable hog house, provided plenty of clean water and pasture, and carefully practiced good sanitation methods in addition to efficient feeding. He was able to raise eight pigs from the first litter. With the second litter he won the contest.

Early Spring Best Time to Apply Oil Sprays

Many fruit growers are interested in the use of oil sprays for the control of San Jose scale. Miscible oil may be purchased from commercial manufacturers, while mineral oil emulsion may be prepared at home. Oil sprays are more effective than lime-sulphur for the control of San Jose scale, but they apparently have less fungicidal value, and there is more danger of injury to the trees resulting from oil applications, says Dr. F. H. Lathrop, chief of the entomology division at Clemson college, who adds, that the most important use of oil sprays is the occasional application for the thorough clean-up of San Jose scale. For regular use, season after season, the old reliable lime-sulphur is safer. Oil sprays for San Jose scale should be applied during the dormant season, but prolonged periods of cold weather should be avoided. A very satisfactory time for making applications of oil sprays is in the early spring just as the buds are swelling.

Garden Insect Pests

The insect pests are two in variety, those that eat the foliage and stems and blossoms and those that suck the juices of the plant. The former include the potato bug and cabbage worm. The latter are confined largely to plant lice. For the eaters, arsenical poisons are the proper treatment. Plant lice, which now appear in all shades from pale green to black, with the exception of blue ones—and they may appear—yield to a spray of nicotine or tobacco.

Planting Strawberries

Strawberries should be grown on rather fertile soil, preferably on soil that has been manured the winter before. The best time to plant the standard variety is in early spring, although late fall planting is no less successful. The Everbearing variety seems to succeed rather better when planted in the fall, according to W. R. Martin, Jr., extension horticulturist of the Kansas State Agricultural college.

Farm Hints

Don't keep scrub and inferior stock; they are wasteful of feed.

Soil conservation is the most vital material problem now before the human race.

If not sure of a stallion's pedigree make his owner prove it in black and white from the official records.

The laying out of the vegetable garden on paper is desirable for the purposes of economy of time and space.

Only one vegetable seems to be indifferent to being grown in the same spot year in and year out, and that is the onion.

Don't trust that bull. He may be safe, but again he may be one of those that goes wrong every day or two and kills somebody.

Buy your Golden Bantam sweet corn of a reliable seedsmen. It varies considerably in quality. Selected strains are best.

If one has two rows of the same vegetable and uses a different succession crop in each row, the gardener may note which was the more successful combination.

Asparagus and rhubarb are best planted in spring when fresh roots are obtainable. The one-year-old asparagus roots seem to take hold better than the two-year-old ones.

What Do You Know About Sole Leather?

HERE ARE A FEW LEATHER FACTS:

The best leather is tanned Steer Hide.

Steers are raised for their meat—not for their hides.

There is as great a difference in the quality of leather as in the quality of meat.

Good leather always comes from over good meat, and vice versa.

Heavy hides are taken from cattle four years or older.

Most thick leather nowadays is artificially swelled by acid—often sulphuric acid, which rots the fiber, rots the stitching and destroys the wear. The breeding-up of cattle by dairymen and the younger kill to supply tender meat, produce the best hide and the best leather, of medium thickness.

Country hides are badly cut in the skinning and are of little value for soles leather.

Most newspaper quotations are on country hides.

Packer Hides are rarely flesh-cut in skinning and, therefore, bring several times the price of country hides.

Hides are always heavily salted to preserve, and are sold salt and all.

The average weight of a green-salted, steer hide is 60 lbs.

To properly tan, it must remain in the tanning liquors from six to nine months.

A 60 lb. green salted hide will lose 20 lbs. or $\frac{1}{3}$ its green weight in a good, natural, non-acid tannage.

A tanned hide will give four distinct qualities of leather.

World's Largest Tree

Forest fires threatening the redwoods and sequoias in northern California are a menace that may destroy the oldest and largest growths in the world. It is claimed by scientists that the General Sherman tree, in Sequoia park, is the largest living thing, towering 279.9 feet above the earth, and boasting a diameter of 36.5 feet. Two other trees are taller, but none so broad. In the 3,200 acres comprising Sequoia National park, there are 5,000 trees that have diameter in excess of ten feet.

Wilbur Orders Middies to Become Air Pilots

Washington.—Students at the naval academy at Annapolis after this year will be trained as aircraft pilots or observers, as well as ships' officers, Secretary Wilbur has issued an order adding courses in aviation to the academy's curriculum, beginning with the 1926 class.

The action follows recommendations of a special board appointed at the request of the President late last year to study the relative values of battleships and aircraft among the various naval weapons.

The board began its work soon after inception of the controversy over the superiority of the airplane or the battleship, but some time before Col. William Mitchell, former assistant chief of the army air service, began his fight for a unified air department.

PRISONERS LEARN BY MAIL COURSE

Larger Percentage Finish Than in Civil Life.

New York.—A larger proportion of inmates of penal institutions complete correspondence courses than in civil life, according to officials of the National Society of Penal Information. William B. Carver, secretary in charge of the educational work among prisoners, recently explained the society's aims as follows:

"We desire to assist prisoners to get on their feet after they complete their terms. Through the agency of the Welfare League association we supply correspondence courses to prisoners in New York state, in order to increase their earning power and develop in them the habit of initiative and continuous effort inseparable from intelligent studies," said Mr. Carver. "Our statistics show that from 80 to 90 per cent of the prisoners taking the courses complete their work, an average far in excess of those people who take correspondence courses in civil life."

"Prison work should be looked upon as an educational matter, aside from the idea of punishment or retribution. Prisoners hate the word 'reform,' so we call it 'social re-education.' We try to develop social tendencies, to encourage unselfish service and manly self-development."

"The fundamental factors we have struck in our employment work are that the prisoners' previous training does not tend to form habits of continuous effort, and that many are poorly prepared to take their part in the life of the community."

Prison Schools Inadequate.

"The prison schools are inadequate. They teach men to read and write and give a little arithmetic. Prisoners are not obliged to attend, but many go to avoid the work in the shops. The prison classes are often run by inmate teachers, who give little enthusiasm, and supply no vocational training."

"Our society furnishes courses to a limited number of men. At present we have 47 still taking courses out of 87 who applied, and in most cases completed their work. Most of these men are in New York institutions—Clinton prison at Dannemora, Auburn, Sing Sing, and Great Meadow at Conestock—but we have one federal prisoner at Fort Leavenworth who is taking a course in advanced English."

"Most of the men prefer the courses issued by the Massachusetts state division of university extension, under the department of education, whose courses are chiefly practical, including such crafts as steamfitting, salesmanship and traffic management. However, ten or twelve of our men are taking courses given by Columbia university. One man is studying journalism; two are studying advanced English; one, a former engineer, is studying technical German. One of our students is taking a course in salesmanship from La Salle university, Chicago."

We receive most enthusiastic letters from our students. One student of steamfitting worked his way up from the coal hole to the boiler room at Dannemora. Before he entered he was a common laborer. Another boy, twenty-seven years old, with seven years already spent in various institutions and a term till 1938, is studying the modern gasoline engine. One of our graduates took a course in salesmanship, and just wrote the society that he had secured a job. Another man, confined for ten years, writes that he has memorized every page of his lessons on traffic management."

Limited by Money.

The funds for this work are supplied by the Welfare League association, 25 West Forty-third street, and it was stated that the number of applicants for correspondence courses was limited by the amount of money at their disposal. Every prisoner's application must be indorsed by the head teacher at his prison, and is then forwarded to the Welfare League association for action. According to their funds, they order the course from either Columbia or Massachusetts, and the rest is in the hands of James A. Moyer, director of the Massachusetts extension courses, and of Dr. James C. Egbert of Columbia.

It is hoped to extend this work from New York into neighboring states.

Through the work thus arranged the prisoners are becoming part of the educational system; education is overcoming the ignorance which leads to crime. In its work among released prisoners the Welfare league has helped 1,916 men, getting jobs for 504 of them. These men came from 23 states; some wanted advice, some medical assistance, but most of them merely wanted to report progress and obtain encouragement.

The executive committee of the organization includes: Thomas Mott Osborn, former warden of Sing Sing, who sponsored the Mutual Welfare leagues of prisoners at Sing Sing and Auburn prisons, president; Frank Marshall Knight, chairman; Paul W. Garrett, secretary and treasurer; John Jay Schleffelin, George W. Kirchwey, Spencer Miller, Jr., John J. Molloy, employment secretary, and William B. Carver, educational secretary.

OHIO AND WEST VIRGINIA LINKED TOGETHER AS A UNIT

Headquarters For the Two States Will Be Established At Columbus Which Will Become the Center of Enforcement Work—Thomas Stone Is Touted As the New Director.

That Thomas E. Stone, regional prohibition director at Cleveland will become the federal prohibition administrator for the new district composed of Ohio and West Virginia with headquarters at Columbus is persistently reported.

The new scheme abolishes the office of state director now held by L. L. Porterfield, but gossip here is that Porterfield will continue in the prohibition enforcement in some capacity.

The new program under which Assistant Secretary Andrews will seek to make the country dry was announced Tuesday, and the way was paved for radical changes in the personnel now engaged in the work.

State lines will be abolished, federal directors for each state will be eliminated, new districts founded wholly on lines bounding federal judicial districts will be created and a general decentralization of authority will take place in the reorganization. The weeding out of undesirables will be accomplished without haste, since Andrews has no intention of filling the entire list of places immediately and later finding he has appointees with whom he is not satisfied.

The Washington headquarters, where authority has centered since the Volstead act was passed will be conducted under the same officers as at present but their duties will be more of a supervisory and less of an administrative character.

Each of the district officials will have two assistants, one of whom will have charge of permissive work, or the control of permits, and distribution while the other will devote his efforts to enforcement.

Andrews is convinced that a substantial saving in expenditures will be effected under the new scheme. He said he had not been able to calculate the total cost of carrying on the work under the new system but believed a considerable reduction in personnel would result.

He already has begun consideration of the question of better pay for the administrators and their two assistants. His thought is to make the job attractive, financially, to valuable men and he has asked Comptroller General McCarl for a ruling on the salary question. It was reported that he intended to establish salaries as high as $10,000 a year for the administrators.

Columbus will be known as administrative headquarters for district 11, which will include Ohio and West Virginia.

The new program has the approval of the president and in making it public Secretary Mellon expressed also his own whole-hearted support.

EASTERN STAR INSPECTION BIG SUCCESS

OVERTIME PERIOD

Required By Washington To Defeat Circleville Eagles Sunday Afternoon.

South Central Ohio League Standing.

Sunday's Results

Washington 4; Circleville 3, (13 innings).

Wilmington 10; London 5.

With the chance of going into a tie for first place in the South Central Ohio League, Circleville went to Washington Sunday, and put up a fine article of ball, but after thirteen hectic innings they tasted defeat by a score of 4 to 3 and dropped to third position while the Washington team secured a commanding hold on the top rung of the ladder.

In the meantime Wilmington invaded London and got away with a 10 to 5 victory which gave them second place. On next Sunday Wilmington will meet the Eagles here and the Birds are determined to change berths with them in this game.

The game at Washington Sunday was a nice article of ball and many old time fans stated it was the best game they had ever seen in that town.

There was enough hitting to keep up the interest, for the spectators, but both pitchers, McGrainer and Burst, were very stingy when hits meant runs, and both kept the safe blows well distributed. Burst established a nice record in the fore part of the game when Circleville could not reach first base in the second, third, fourth and fifth innings, and McGrainer showed a wonderful brand of pitching when he shut the home team out from the fourth to the thirteenth.

Both teams put up a snappy game afield, but one error being made in the entire game.

Circleville's three runs came in the first, sixth and eighth innings, Rife making the first two, scoring on Targee's hit in the first and McGrainer's safety in the sixth. The tying run in the eighth was one of those spectacular affairs. With two men down Allen hit safely and was followed by McGrainer, who hit one that dropped in the farthest point inside the field, in the center field corner. Jones' good whip held Mac at third and he was left when Targee was thrown out at first for the final out. Mac's hit was a terrific blow and would have cleared the fences if it had been a few feet to either side.

Washington tied the score in the second on hits by Orahod and Sollars and an infield out, and took the lead in the fourth when Doyle hit safely and Haley tripped and scored while Sollars was being thrown out at first.

Washington broke up the game in the last of the thirteenth and Sammy Burst won his own game by leading off with a safe hit. He reached third while Jones and Moon were being retired and scored on Tommy Doyle's safe hit. Doyle's rap was a hard drive to the left of second base and Charley Rife made a beautiful attempt to reach the ball, but just touched it with the tip of his glove.

The kind of ball that is being played in this league is equal to that seen anywhere and a big crowd should be present next Sunday and root the Birds into second place.

FINAL ARRANGEMENTS

Completed For 500 Boys Who Will Go To Camp Roosevelt On June 29th.

Final arrangements have been completed for the 500 boys who are going to Camp Roosevelt at Fort Sheridan, Illinois, on the afternoon of June 29, to attend the first period of the summer's encampment. Streets of large army pyramidal tents, rows on rows of cots piled high with blankets, and a well stocked mess hall with doors wide open stand ready to greet the rookies when they alight from the special train which will leave the Congress street stub of the Northwestern Elevated railroad in Chicago at 1:30 p. m. daylight saving time. Boys coming from other cities will meet this train.

The unusually keen interest in this summer's encampment is attributed by Major F. L. Beals, in command, to the new location at Fort Sheridan, and the romance and glamor attendant upon living in the same manner as Uncle Sam's vast army of soldiers.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

Cost of Candy

In the year 1923 the people of the United States spent nearly $390,000,000 for candy, an average of more than $1,000,000 a day. Assuming an average price of 40 cents a pound for all grades, this amount of money would purchase nearly 1,000,000,000 pounds of candy in a year.—Lydia J. Roberts in Hygeia.

Waistline, Longer Skirts Presented

Pfominent Paris Designer Offers Some Interesting Models.

When a dress authority announces a radical innovation, the always fascinating and usually perplexing subject of fashions becomes a matter of the moment. Long after a standard is accepted its vogue continues. Once it becomes the mode, women of fashion keep to it tenaciously. Anything revolutionary in dress is slow in coming, and ordinarily passes quite as slowly.

Among the smartly dressed women of today no one seems to recall just when the waistline widened from a small steel-bound circle to a wider one of ease, or when the belt dropped from its normal point to one almost out of sight, says a fashion writer in the New York Times. But these two things changed the entire style of costumes a few seasons ago and wiped out centuries of prejudice and convention. It required something of the crusader's spirit to abolish the rigid lines and formality that stays, bands and crinolines gave to the fashionable figure. But somehow, in the sweep toward more wholesome ways, this came about. The easy bodice that shows no curve between neck and hipline, the collar that leaves breathing room and the skirt that clears the ground expressed style in terms of comfort. They appeared to have come to stay. But that is not the way of fashion, and modern dress lacks the conservatism of highland kilts.

We have always the thrill of expectancy and the consciously smart is the one who is first to swing the trend in an opposite direction.

To Restore Waistline.

Jean Patou, who has succeeded in establishing a sympathetic sense of American taste in dress, has decided, it is said, to restore the waistline. Just what part he took in its obliteration, a while ago, no one seems to recall. But lately he has presented some interesting examples in which a woman's waist is charmingly and becomingly indicated just where it belongs. How this is to be accomplished without bringing back the trappings that form artificial curves is not clear, but that is one of the privileged secrets of a designer's art. There are historic precedents for his guidance.

In several models of one sort and another, usually evening dress, or the positive opposite, such as tailored costumes, there have been shown the possibilities of a normal belt line, and since Patou has declared for it, his master hand may safely be trusted. To this creator is also credited a lengthening of the skirt.

Such revulsion of sentiment followed the introduction of the knee-length skirt a few seasons ago that little by little hems were dropped, and some of the leading couturiers made their smartest models with skirts that touched the floor. Quite unaccountably the advance styles from most of the representative houses this spring returned to the extremely short skirt, so short, in fact, that the more exclusive clientele rebelled. So Patou's endorsement comes at the psychological moment. The response to this suggestion is already evident in all types of dress but sports clothes, and even here, although having a shorter skirt than the more formal gowns, are still only short enough for freedom of action—several inches below the knee. On one innovation designers and their audience are agreed—the ensemble. It is not easy to discover the reason of the style that immediately becomes the rage. It is possible that the extreme, sometimes discordant motifs, introduced one after another through past seasons, with violent colors that threatened to blunt the color sense, brought a demand for uniformity and symmetry. In the separate garments, skirts and blouses, rocks and wraps, ingenuity was exhausted and senses were wearied to satiety with the sensational. It was something suggesting consistency as evolved. Thus the madly popular ensemble came into being.

Popularity of Ensemble.

Ensemble has for many years signified harmony in designs, color and taste in the entire costume of a woman. This season the word is a kind of slogan presenting the popular version of an old idea—the three-piece gown. That was a sort of glorified tailored suit in which broadcloth or some other heavy suiting was combined with finer materials, a rather weighty composition. It did not "go" for just that reason. With the introduction of lightweight, soft materials in a season that is madly, intensely, almost wholly silk, the ensemble has become a compelling idea.

The year's first ensemble was built of a frock in some soft fabric—silk, crepe, voile, chiffon—with a wrap lined with the dress material. The result was practical and unusually charming. It gave one a complete costume, and the coat or cape was a comfortable accessory. The idea has been developed in countless ways and in as many materials as the season offers.

Women and their dressmakers have gone ensemble mad, and everything possible in the changing phases of styles has been translated into an ensemble. There is the ensemble for the street, for afternoon and for daytime dress for every occasion. These run the gamut of new ideas in materials and novelty of composition.

The most usual ensemble of service value is accomplished with a printed crepe for the frock, a three-quarter or seven-eighth length coat of plain goods lined with the figured crepe to match the dress. With the great variety of new patterns brought out by leading manufacturers the possible variants in this type of outfit are almost without limit. The coat is nearly always made of satin, of silk poplin or of the wide-wale bengaline. Many uncommon and delightful color combinations are shown.

This is a year of soft fabrics, which have so completely captivated the fashionable world that heavier materials are eclipsed, and nothing is too sheer or fragile to build an ensemble.

In a unique model from a prominent French house the usual order is reversed, and a coat of flat crepe, of which the frock is made, is lined with kasha, for warmth. In another engaging model, the crepe de chine wrap matching the dress is lined with velvet. The quintessence of grace and elegance is expressed in an afternoon ensemble of an indestructible voile, the predominating novelty of the season. This voile in a floral pattern of several beautiful colors on a black ground is made after a softly draped, rather simple mode.

New Materials Introduced.

Again Worth scores in some ensembles of distinction in which he introduces delicate fabrics combined with heavier silks, and sometimes with two materials of the same weight, one figured, the other plain. Drecoll, too, has done some beautiful ensembles for the early season, and some afternoon costumes of this type have come from the ateliers of Molyneux and Goupy. The idea has taken so well this side of the water that every modiste and dressmaker is doing ensembles of any and every sort of goods.

The number of new materials introduced in the ensembles is particularly interesting, for they illustrate also the latest fancies in color. Silk paca is much liked and is shown in lovely shades of beige, gray and in several greens. This material in emerald green is made into a simple straight-line frock with a coat of the same shade lined with lighter green crepe de chine. Chanel, who creates this smart, refreshing ensemble for afternoon, has done some strikingly original things in combining plain materials of pleasantly harmonizing colors.

Some of the best Paris designers are using much lace, all of the novelty all-overs in beige and ecru, and a great deal of chintilly, combining it with the crepes and voiles for afternoon ensembles suitable for warmer months. An indestructible voile in rose beige with softly tinted floral design is made into a charming afternoon gown after a rather "dreamy" model, and with this is a long, straight, loose coat of beige lace, lined with the voile, with subtle artistic effect.

CLOTHING CLUB OF DEERCREEK MET JUNE 18

Once again the Clothing club of Deercreek township met to hold their regular meeting June 18, at the school house. The meeting was called to order by the president, Carolyn Bochar and opened by singing several selections of club songs. The secretary's report was then read.

The members answered roll call by giving the title and author of a good book they had read.

During the business period, the program for the next meeting was read. After the business period was over the meeting was turned over to the leader, Mrs. Wanda Wardell and members were assisted in making club aprons. At the dinner hour everyone enjoyed a box lunch in the school dining room. During the afternoon games were played which had been planned by the entertainment committee; Marvepe Carter, Magdalene Wardell, Eleanor Slager and Elizabeth Warner.

The meeting was again turned over to our leader, Mrs. Wardell. Irene Baird gave a demonstration, "How to Draft a Kimono Dress Pattern." Patterns were then cut out by the members of the club.

The next meeting will be held Wednesday afternoon July 1, at the school building. All members are requested to be present, as plans will be made for the "County Club Tour" July 9.

WHAT DOES MODERN GIRL REALLY WANT?

Question One of Them Finds Hard to Answer.

When you analyze the question of what modern girls really want, it is necessary to disabuse the mind of the delightfully vague, magazine-cover, tennis-playing, matinee-going creature as a true conception of the modern girl.

In a general way, the modern girl belongs to two recognized social classes—the middle classes—and how many subdivisions are here!—and the class which is generally known as the "upper."

In the middle class you will find that the vaguest and most doubtful feminine member of the family has been taught the art of shorthand and typewriting. In the firm conviction that sooner or later she will become an "invaluable asset to the firm" and find romance in the course of her work. What she wants is either to be taught to spell and write her own language, or to clear the course for the professional girl, "A Most Modern Girl" writes, in the Washington Post.

In the next social subsection there is the girl who works spasmodically—in every sense of the word—and whose family seems to spend its time imploring her to "give it up" and "stay at home and help mother." Whether she realizes it or not, the only possible solution of her problem is matrimony, with a strong accent on the last syllable in view of her general inability to cope with anything for long.

Then there is the real professional girl, by which is meant the girl who works because she must, and who works thoroughly because she enjoys it, and because she means to get there. What does she want? Certainly she smokes too much; she "gads about" too much; spends too much, flirts too much. But why not? Hers is the doubtful privilege of being an important man's right hand for years, and of receiving the "sack" when he dies. The humiliating classification of "surplus" is applied to those of her number who are not fortunate enough to find a man to marry them. . . . She does not know what she wants—so she eats, works and is merry.

Here's Another Idea of Ancestry of Man

Most men believe that mankind is descended from one "Adam" or a single pre-human stock. Dr. Francis Graham, writing in the Forum, as a result of his studies of a type of imbecility called Mongolism, concludes that mankind is of three-fold origin.

According to this scheme, three great branches once diverged from a common stem. From one branch sprang the oranges and Mongolian and Australo-Caucasian man. From another the gorillas and the negroes. From the third the chimpanzees, and probably the Mesopotamian races.

Now, although schemes of this sort have been bitterly attacked, they do at any rate "explain" not only the occurrence of the Mongol in our midst, but the characters and incidence of certain forms of imbecility other than that we call Mongolism. If this hypothesis becomes established we shall have to admit that the population of Europe is a blend, in different proportions, of the black, the white and the yellow, and we shall find no difficulty in understanding many facts in anatomy and in medicine that have hitherto baffled us.

AMUSEMENTS

"Wages of Virtue" Gloria Swanson latest Paramount production, directed by Allan Dwan who made both "Man-handled" and "Her Love Story" will be shown today at the Met theater. The story is an adaptation by Forrest Halsey of the popular novel of the same name by Percival Wren.

The picture is a pleasing love tale woven about a young girl, product of the slums, who becomes the toast of the French Foreign Legion. As Carmelita, Miss Swanson has a role ideally suited to her, a part that makes "Wages of Virtue" stand out as the greatest thing she has ever done in her lengthy career.

The story has interest, appeal, comedy and all the rest, and we sure miss our guess if it doesn't prove the finest entertainment you've witnessed in many months.

Ben Lyon, you remember him in First National's "Flaming Youth," "Painted People," etc., plays opposite the star, heading a real all-star cast. Norman Trevor, Ivan Linow, Joe Moore, Armand Cortez, Adrienne d'Ambricourt and Paul Panzer are a few of the prominent players in the other roles.

The custom of throwing a pinch of spiced salt over the left shoulder three times to break the "hoodoo" is a pagan survival of the times when salt was one of the offerings to the evil deities who sent bad luck.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Apricots by the Yard.
There seems to be nothing in Damascus they cannot turn into a sweet of some kind. The sweetstuffs of Damascus are famous; they are really candied fruits. As the climate is hot, every form of plum, apricot, peach, melon, grape, greenage and nut grows. These are soaked in sugar preparations, and when served they are most luscious. Put in tins or bottles they last for years; but when freshly made they are perfectly delicious, especially the walnuts. For packing, round common wooden boxes are used, quaintly stenciled in Arabic design, and these boxes of dried fruit are sent all over the world, but of course nothing is ever so good when it has been packed as it is when it is freshly made.

PIG RAISING IS DISCUSSED BY AN EXPERT

Porkers Should be put on the Fall Market as Early as Possible.

Not only is it advisable to push pigs on pasture, but it is the one plan that has been found to be most profitable to the farmer.
Professor John M. Evvard, swine expert, gave this statement to his class in a lecture before the Radio Farm school of the Blue Valley Creamery institute. And Professor Evvard ought to know. For fifteen years now he has been in charge of the experimental work with live stock at Iowa State college. Furthermore he gave the data upon which he based his conclusions.
"Spring pigs may either take the short route to the pork barrel by hitting the market from September to early December, or they may take the long route marketward by getting there around Christmas time or as late as next fall," Professor Evvard said. "If pigs of this spring's farrow go to market in the fall of 1926, they will be practically a year and half old and classed as heavies. Inasmuch as heavies do not usually sell well as compared to light hogs in the fall of the year, there is not only a discount in price but in addition we have the excessive overhead costs as well as surplus charges. It would seem therefore that pigs should be pushed for all they are worth until on the way to market in the first to late months of fall.
"Skimping on pasture is a costly error, as we have found out in our experiments. Pigs on Alfalfa receiving a limited ration during the grazing season and which were full fed after the pasture season closed took 192 days to get to the 225 pound weight. Self fed pigs took 402 pounds of concentrate per hundred pounds of gain, 21 pounds of which was tankage, whereas the self fed ones took only 394 pounds. The self fed pigs, too, required only 13 pounds of tankage for the hundred pounds of gain. The difference in the selling price of a hundred pounds for November than for December was about two dollars per pig, so this has considerable money making significance. Too, since the self fed lot took less pasture, which is worth from $20 to $40 an acre for hay-making purposes, there was a gain there."
Farmers should aim to get their pigs to market in the early fall where ever possible, states Professor Evvard who says pigs pushed rapidly on the proper feed will get to the required selling weight of 200, 225 pounds in six to eight months and so bring the highest prices. This also makes it possible to clear the pastures and houses for the fall pigs which require space, time and attention at that season of the year.

Continent Believed to Lie Under Ocean
Does the Atlantic ocean roll over a lost continent? Le Plongeon, who deciphered the hieroglyphics among the ruins of Yucatan, in Central America, came upon inscriptions describing a catastrophe which submerged the old Atlantean continent, legends of which have survived in literature from the earliest times.
It may be that this catastrophe gave rise to the equally widespread belief in the flood which destroyed the early inhabitants of our planet. Certain it is that the American continent, although called the New world, is geologically the oldest land on the globe, and the monuments found in the jungles of Yucatan were ancient when the pyramids of Egypt were built.
The catastrophe is supposed to have taken place about 9000 B. C., and at that time there was a highly organized civilization in Yucatan, which would seem to be a remnant of the lost continent. It is not a very large country, yet, in spite of the great difficulties of exploration, the ruins of 172 cities have been discovered. Some of these are so extensive that they must have contained half a million inhabitants, and it is possible that the pyramids found in the jungle gave the pattern at a much later date to the pyramids of Egypt.
When Oysters Are Good
Oysters should not be eaten during their spawning months. It is merely a coincidence that these months in the year do not contain the "r."

CULTURED CLAIRE

By JANE GOODELL
(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
CLAIRE was industriously trying to make the shabby living room look like the pictures in the latest furniture advertisement.
"The only thing this furniture is good for is the junk heap," she grumbled. "Why on earth won't dad let us fix things up a little? The trouble is, you're trying to be a high-brow. Why the decorations just because you're going to have a beau?" and she pointed to a vase holding two rather wilted carnations which Claire had brought home from the store.
But Claire was too busily engaged in placing some books carelessly on the table to reply.
"Books surely do lend an air, Mag," she said. "Wish I'd had time to stop at the library to get a book by George Elliot. Oswald mentioned one last evening and I said I had read some of his books but had forgotten their names. These two books of poetry will make up for it, though. How does my hair look? These jade earrings are the very latest."
"Sara loaned them to me. You see, Oswald is real class. He has charge of the gents' furnishings and makes good money. Mother gave me her word that all the rest of the family would stay in the kitchen tonight. They would only queer me; you know that."
Being one of the family designated for the culinary department and the time near at hand for the arrival of Oswald, Mag took her sewing and joined the less refined members of her family. Claire heard them laugh uproariously on her arrival. She knew that they were having some fun at her expense. But that was her trial in being different from the rest. After locking the door against Bob's possible entrance to "queen" her, she settled herself on the old-fashioned sofa, the light rather low, with the poems and thoughts of Oswald.
Good-looking Oswald. No more clerking in stores, if he married her. Fine clothes. Thus the time slipped by.
Oswald, meantime, tapped on the door in a gentlemanly way, but the loud rendition of the "Deep Sea Blues" on a nearby neighbor's player piano entirely drowned out his tapping.
Claire had drawn the shades to the lowest possible point, so the impression made on the outsider was that the house was in darkness. Seeing a bright light in the rear of the house and hearing merry bursts of laughter from a partly open window, Oswald walked around and tapped just as gentlemanly on the rear door.
"Come in," called dad, rather expecting a friend for his evening game of checkers.
"May I introduce myself?" said the polite Oswald. "You surely look like a happy family. Being alone in the city I don't often run into anything like this."
"Have a chair and help settle some of our disputes," said the hospitable dad, offering him a cigar. "Bring more coffee and doughnuts, mother."
Oswald seemed quite at ease. "That looks like a work of art, Miss Margaret," he said. "May I ask just what—?"
"It's a new paisley blouse," responded Mag with a display of white teeth and pretty dimples. "We have to hand it to old King Tut for these swanky oriental affairs. He sure made us all get busy and follow his styles. But, say, dad, show Mr. Oswald that book I brought from the library. You see, dad's quite up on archeology himself, and it was of Egypt we were talking when you came in. I asked the librarian for a book on oriental collections. Incidentally I copied this blouse from a picture of Pharaoh's wife. Dad thinks—"
But what dad thought was not what Oswald thought and the argument was hot.
Mother brought a fresh supply of doughnuts and coffee and time slipped by.
A noise as if a high-heeled shoe were thrown viciously on the floor roused them a little from their conversation. Another followed at a short interval and there was a pause in the talk.
"It's Claire getting ready for bed. That's the way she acts when she's peeved at something," said Bob, his enunciation being as distinct as was possible without doing an injustice to a large red apple, the third he had devoured that evening.
"Why, can it be bedtime?" Looking at his watch, Oswald verified his own question. "But Miss Claire," he gasped. "I came to call on Miss Claire. Perhaps, though, she forgot and went out for the evening. I'm afraid I've intruded on you folks too long. But I've surely enjoyed the evening. Learned a lot, too, Mr. Dennis."
"And, Mag—Miss Margaret, how about looking over those Egyptian specimens at the museum on Saturday? And, by the way, if the little paisley blouse is finished, wear it. We may go somewhere for dinner."

Must Wait
A certain furniture shop was famous for its antiques. A stranger entered one morning and was met by a small boy, who told him the proprietor was not in.
"Perhaps you can tell me what I want to know," he said to the boy. "I called two weeks ago regarding half a dozen genuine old Empire chairs. You had only two of them in at the time, but were expecting the other four at any moment. Have they arrived?"
"No, sir," replied the boy. "They haven't finished making 'em yet."—Minneapolis Tribune.

Egg Transportation Not Profitable to Railroads

New York consumes 1,800,000,000 eggs a year and then a few dozen more. The job of getting them from the farmyard to the counter of the corner store is beset with difficult problems. The breakfast table depends on the carrier as well as on the hen, says the Times of that city.
Time was, and not very long ago, when the railroads lost money on every case of eggs they handled. Even now eggs are classed by the railroads as traffic without profit. Sometimes the breakage is due to the character of the egg. Many of them have shells naturally too weak to stand a long journey; the hens have been improperly fed. Fertile eggs, too, are likely to go to pieces on the trip. The United States Department of Agriculture estimates an annual loss from fertile eggs in this country amounting to $15,000,000. Again, some eggs are too long for standard fillers and suffer "end crush" as a result.

Washington Boy Is Pig Contest Winner

His Litter Produced 3,055 Pounds of Pork.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A farm boy of Spokane county, Wash., belonging to a junior agricultural extension club, was a ton-litter contest winner of 1924, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture. He not only produced 3,055 pounds of pork from one litter of pigs in six months, but kept a careful record of how he did it, including the kind and amount of feeds used and all expense involved. His records show that his pigs made an average daily gain of 1.4 pounds each from date of birth until sold. This gain cost a little less than 8 1/3 cents per pound, not including alfalfa pasture to which the pigs always had free access. The boy sold his prize winners to a packing house for $11.10 per 100 pounds, receiving 25 cents per 100 pounds because of the excellent finish of his hogs.

This young stockman, Fred Gray, began in the swine business about two years ago by joining a pig club which the junior agricultural extension agent of the county organized, buying a pig as other pig club members do, to feed and manage in demonstrating the economic value of the best methods in swine husbandry. His purchase was a Duroc sow of excellent type. He built a warm, movable hog house, provided plenty of clean water and pasture, and carefully practiced good sanitation methods in addition to efficient feeding. He was able to raise eight pigs from the first litter. With the second litter he won the contest.

Early Spring Best Time to Apply Oil Sprays

Many fruit growers are interested in the use of oil sprays for the control of San Jose scale. Miscible oil may be purchased from commercial manufacturers, while mineral oil emulsion may be prepared at home. Oil sprays are more effective than lime-sulphur for the control of San Jose scale, but they apparently have less fungicidal value, and there is more danger of injury to the trees resulting from oil applications, says Dr. F. H. Lathrop, chief of the entomology division at Clemson college, who adds, that the most important use of oil sprays is the occasional application for the thorough clean-up of San Jose scale. For regular use, season after season, the old reliable lime-sulphur is safer. Oil sprays for San Jose scale should be applied during the dormant season, but prolonged periods of cold weather should be avoided. A very satisfactory time for making applications of oil sprays is in the early spring just as the buds are swelling.

Garden Insect Pests

The insect pests are two in variety, those that eat the foliage and stems and blossoms and those that suck the juices of the plant. The former include the potato bug and cabbage worm. The latter are confined largely to plant lice. For the eaters, arsenical poisons are the proper treatment. Plant lice, which now appear in all shades from pale green to black, with the exception of blue ones—and they may appear—yield to a spray of nicotine or tobacco.

Planting Strawberries

Strawberries should be grown on rather fertile soil, preferably on soil that has been manured the winter before. The best time to plant the standard variety is in early spring, although late fall planting is no less successful. The Everbearing variety seems to succeed rather better when planted in the fall, according to W. R. Martin, Jr., extension horticulturist of the Kansas State Agricultural college.

Farm Hints

Don't keep scrub and inferior stock; they are wasteful of feed.

Soil conservation is the most vital material problem now before the human race.

If not sure of a stallion's pedigree make his owner prove it in black and white from the official records.

The laying out of the vegetable garden on paper is desirable for the purposes of economy of time and space.

Only one vegetable seems to be indifferent to being grown in the same spot year in and year out, and that is the onion.

Don't trust that bull. He may be safe, but again he may be one of those that goes wrong every day or two and kills somebody.

Buy your Golden Bantam sweet corn of a reliable seedsmen. It varies considerably in quality. Selected strains are best.

If one has two rows of the same vegetable and uses a different succession crop in each row, the gardener may note which was the more successful combination.

Asparagus and rhubarb are best planted in spring when fresh roots are obtainable. The one-year-old asparagus roots seem to take hold better than the two-year-old size.

What Do You Know About Sole Leather?

HERE ARE A FEW LEATHER FACTS:

The best leather is tanned Steer Hide. Steers are raised for their meat—not for their hides. There is as great a difference in the quality of leather as in the quality of meat.

Good leather always comes from over good meat, and vice versa. Heavy hides are taken from cattle four years or older. Most thick leather nowadays is artificially swelled by acid—often sulphuric acid, which rots the fiber, rots the stitching and destroys the wear. The breeding-up of cattle by dairymen and the younger kill to supply tender meat, produce the best hide and the best leather, of medium thickness.

Country hides are badly cut in the skinning and are of little value for soiling leather.

Most newspaper quotations are on country hides. Packer Hides are rarely flesh-cut in skinning and, therefore, bring several times the price of country hides.

Hides are always heavily salted to preserve, and are sold salt and all.

The average weight of a green-salted, steer hide is 60 lbs. To properly tan, it must remain in the tanning liquors from six to nine months.

A 60 lb. green salted hide will lose 20 lbs. or $\frac{1}{3}$ its green weight in a good, natural, non-acid tannage.

A tanned hide will give four distinct qualities of leather.

World's Largest Tree

Forest fires threatening the redwoods and sequoias in northern California are a menace that may destroy the oldest and largest growths in the world. It is claimed by scientists that the General Sherman tree, in Sequoia park, is the largest living thing, towering 279.9 feet above the earth, and boasting a diameter of 36.5 feet. Two other trees are taller, but none so broad. In the 3,200 acres comprising Sequoia National park, there are 5,000 trees that have diameter in excess of ten feet.

Wilbur Orders Middies to Become Air Pilots

Washington.—Students at the naval academy at Annapolis after this year will be trained as aircraft pilots or observers, as well as ships' officers, Secretary Wilbur has issued an order adding courses in aviation to the academy's curriculum, beginning with the 1926 class.

The action follows recommendations of a special board appointed at the request of the President late last year to study the relative values of battleships and aircraft among the various naval weapons.

The board began its work soon after inception of the controversy over the superiority of the airplane or the battleship, but some time before Col. William Mitchell, former assistant chief of the army air service, began his fight for a unified air department.

PRISONERS LEARN BY MAIL COURSE

Larger Percentage Finish Than in Civil Life.

New York.—A larger proportion of inmates of penal institutions complete correspondence courses than in civil life, according to officials of the National Society of Penal Information. William B. Carver, secretary in charge of the educational work among prisoners, recently explained the society's aims as follows:

"We desire to assist prisoners to get on their feet after they complete their terms. Through the agency of the Welfare League association we supply correspondence courses to prisoners in New York state, in order to increase their earning power and develop in them the habit of initiative and continuous effort inseparable from intelligent studies," said Mr. Carver. "Our statistics show that from 80 to 90 per cent of the prisoners taking the courses complete their work, an average far in excess of those people who take correspondence courses in civil life."

"Prison work should be looked upon as an educational matter, aside from the idea of punishment or retribution. Prisoners hate the word 'reform,' so we call it 'social re-education.' We try to develop social tendencies, to encourage unselfish service and manly self-development."

"The fundamental factors we have struck in our employment work are that the prisoners' previous training does not tend to form habits of continuous effort, and that many are poorly prepared to take their part in the life of the community."

Prison Schools Inadequate.

"The prison schools are inadequate. They teach men to read and write and give a little arithmetic. Prisoners are not obliged to attend, but many go to avoid the work in the shops. The prison classes are often run by inmate teachers, who give little enthusiasm, and supply no vocational training."

"Our society furnishes courses to a limited number of men. At present we have 47 still taking courses out of 87 who applied, and in most cases completed their work. Most of these men are in New York institutions—Clinton prison at Dannemora, Auburn, Sing Sing, and Great Meadow at Conestoga—but we have one federal prisoner at Fort Leavenworth who is taking a course in advanced English."

"Most of the men prefer the courses issued by the Massachusetts state division of university extension, under the department of education, whose courses are chiefly practical, including such crafts as steamfitting, salesmanship and traffic management. However, ten or twelve of our men are taking courses given by Columbia university. One man is studying journalism; two are studying advanced English; one, a former engineer, is studying technical German. One of our students is taking a course in salesmanship from La Salle university, Chicago."

We receive most enthusiastic letters from our students. One student of steamfitting worked his way up from the coal hole to the boiler room at Dannemora. Before he entered he was a common laborer. Another boy, twenty-seven years old, with seven years already spent in various institutions and a term till 1938, is studying the modern gasoline engine. One of our graduates took a course in salesmanship, and just wrote the society that he had secured a job. Another man, confined for ten years, writes that he has memorized every page of his lessons on traffic management."

Limited by Money.

The funds for this work are supplied by the Welfare League association, 25 West Forty-third street, and it was stated that the number of applicants for correspondence courses was limited by the amount of money at their disposal. Every prisoner's application must be indorsed by the head teacher at his prison, and is then forwarded to the Welfare League association for action. According to their funds, they order the course from either Columbia or Massachusetts, and the rest is in the hands of James A. Moyer, director of the Massachusetts extension courses, and of Dr. James C. Egbert of Columbia.

It is hoped to extend this work from New York into neighboring states. Through the work thus arranged the prisoners are becoming part of the educational system; education is overcoming the ignorance which leads to crime. In its work among released prisoners the Welfare league has helped 1,916 men, getting jobs for 504 of them. These men came from 23 states; some wanted advice, some medical assistance, but most of them merely wanted to report progress and obtain encouragement.

The executive committee of the organization includes: Thomas Mott Osborn, former warden of Sing Sing, who sponsored the Mutual Welfare leagues of prisoners at Sing Sing and Auburn prisons, president; Frank Marshall Knight, chairman; Paul W. Garrett, secretary and treasurer; John Jay Schieffelin, George W. Kirchwey, Spencer Miller, Jr., John J. Molloy, employment secretary, and William B. Carver, educational secretary.
